

Secure segmented access for remote workers

Next-gen 'VPN' for compliant #wfh employees

As organizations ask employees to work from home because of the Covid-19 virus, many IT teams are struggling to manage remote access to secure corporate assets. Traditional VPNs are being stretched to the limit, and this is hindering teams from ensuring remote employees and vendors are able to effectively work.

The security best practice of segmenting user access is incredibly difficult for existing VPN technologies. With VPNs, security stops at the edge of a network instead of at the individual host or service. A patchwork of VLANs, ACLs, routing rules, firewall policies, and more are applied – which become increasingly complex to maintain. Because of this, VPNs are not scalable, are prone to human error, can be a compliance risk, and disrupt your organization's security posture.

Segmented Remote Access

A better way forward

Our Airwall Solution ensures secure, encrypted access from anywhere in the world over devices. Provide remote access to company resources for employees, vendors, and contractors, while ensuring PCI, HIPAA, and NIST Compliance.

Furthermore, the Airwall Solution reduces the time required to connect or revoke access to the network, even when thousands of devices and systems need to be managed. Whether it's five hundred or five thousand remote workers, we can spin up a secure, scalable solution in minutes.

Unlike VPNs that lack segmentation once authenticated and inside the network, the Airwall Solution only allows secure access to its mutually authenticated and authorized machines. You can create user groups that are invisible to others — even from clients that have valid user credentials — eliminating breaches or unauthorized lateral network movement.
